Cotton stalks (the weed) will grow with marvelous rapidity, the forms (squares) and bolls will fall off, and if rain has fallen everywhere in the South as here in the lowlands of the Mississippi and Arkansas, the quantity of cotton produced will be twenty-five per cent. less in the valleys than was anticidated ten days ago.

McLEAN'S DEFALCATION. When a man is down and a whole community expends imprecations upor maintain silence. It is needless, then, to fan the flame of popular passion. When William McLean still wielded authority and personal and financial influence with which office and money invested him, the APPEAL assalled him witchut stint. An officeholder, like Cresar's wife, should be above suspicion, and we believed that the County Tax-Collectorship was most loosely and carelessly, i not most shamefully and corruptly, managed. We asserted the fact when there was nothing to gain'and much to loss by it, and now that the Grand Jury has nade up its statement and Mr. McLean is impotent, but ready to meet any legal onsequence of his carelessness or crim- the water is in the fact of its being scentinality, it becomes the press, that simple justice may be done, to do nothing which may exasperate the multitude.
